AT&T's Reach Out America Plan is a lot of talk.

You get an hour of AT&T Long Distance calls for just $9.45.

We can't say enough about our new way to call on AT&T Long Distance Service.

It's different. You pay for your calls by the hour instead of by the mile.

It's economical. You pay just $9.45 for an hour of state-to-state calls.

It's simple. You pay this same rate when you call anywhere in the U.S. served by AT&T Long Distance Service, even Alaska and Hawaii.

And that's a lot of miles for your money. Here's how it works.

The Basic Plan. A new way to buy long distance.

For just $9.45 a month, you get one hour of AT&T state-to-state, direct-dial long distance calls. Additional hours cost just $8.25.

If you only use part of an additional hour, you'll only be charged for the part you use.

The Basic Plan applies any time Saturday, Sunday till 5pm and every night from 11pm till 8am.

The Bonus Plan. Get 15% off our already discounted evening rates.

For just $10.85 a month, you can enjoy all the benefits of the Basic Plan plus an additional discount, too.

Enjoy these additional savings Sunday through Friday from 5pm to 11pm when you dial direct, state-to-state, on AT&T.

That means you'll have even more time to take advantage of "Reach Out" America and share all the little things that keep people close.

Select the plan that's right for you. All it takes to enroll is a one-time $10.00 order processing charge.

The "Reach Out" America Plan has a lot to say for it. Sign up and start talking. For more information and to order, call 1 800 551-3131, Ext. 300.

The best service and now an hour of calls for just $9.45. That's AT&T.

Reach out and touch someone.®

Source: Highway Loss Data Institute. Body Styles: SW=Station Wagon; SS=Specialty. All results are stated in relative frequency of injury claims. A relative injury claim frequency of 100 is average. Relative frequencies of less than 70 are defined by HLDI as "Substantially Better than Average."

The Highway Loss Data Institute (HLDI) is a non-profit public service organization associated with the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety. As it has done for several years, HLDI has summarized and published its findings on the frequency of automotive insurance claims.

This year, HLDI finds that 6 of the top 11 models with overall injury claim experience defined as "substantially better than average," are General Motors cars.

We are pleased that GM cars are rated best again, as they have been ever since HLDI started summarizing its findings eight years ago.

We believe this continued excellence reflects not only our cars—their quality, size, weight, and design—but also how and where they are driven.

The HLDI results show that our cars and our customers go well together. And we trust it will continue that way in the years ahead. Because we are doing our part to see that it does.

That's the GM commitment to excellence.

Introducing
The Golden Girls...

Where Your Age Doesn't Matter Unless You're a Cheese

This sassy sitcom about older women bids to become the bright new hit of the current season

By Cyra McFadden

Fellow senior citizens (anybody over the age of 30): haul your bones out of the recliner and send up a rousing cheer. We've managed to live long enough, apparently, because we're trendy right now, having supplanted Yuppies as the demographic darlings of the media.

The movie "Cocoon" features a cast of golden oldies. Seventy-seven-year-old Bette Davis was People magazine's cover girl a few months ago. NBC's hottest new series for the fall season is The Golden Girls, about four women of a certain age. With what has to be a fat bankroll riding on it, the network hopes this one will win our hearts and those of people who still have to wear their retainers.

The sitcom stars three of television's heavy hitters—Bea Arthur, Betty White and Rue McClanahan—as well as Estelle Getty, a veteran stage actress fresh from the cast of the award-winning play "Torch Song Trilogy." Its creator-writer is Susan Harris, who brought us Soap, Benson and Hail to the Chief. Jay Sandrich directed the pilot, and Paul Bogart and Jim Drake have signed on for the balance of the initial 13 episodes. All three directors have impressive successes behind them.

NBC has a solid lineup of talent here. It also has what smells like a winner. The general level of confidence, when I visited the set recently, suggested that cast and crew aren't worried about the ratings. They're worrying about IRS-proof tax shelters.

The Golden Girls is set in Miami, with its large population of retired older people. Arthur, White, McClanahan and Getty play four single women sharing a house, expenses and a close, supportive friendship. Rather than live alone, they've combined their financial and emotional resources.

Dorothy (Bea Arthur) is a divorced schoolteacher whose husband left her, after 38 years, for a young stewardess. He now lives on Maui and, in his 60s, has taken up windsurfing. Dorothy hopes he trips on his thongs and falls into a volcano.

Rose (Betty White) is a widow. A gentle soul, she has a mind that doesn't remind one of the proverbial steel trap. "She's just very literal and takes everything at surface value," White says of her. While Rose's lines suggest this is a nice way of saying "dumb bunny," White says no. "Rose isn't dumb, she's just . . . slow. I think of her as always one beat behind."

A grief counselor, Rose is capable of complaining, with no irony whatsoever, that all she sees on the job are depressed people.

The owner of the house, Blanche (Rue McClanahan), is also widowed. A hyper-feminine Southern belle whose drawl you could pour on pancakes, she's a bit → like man-hungry Sue Ann Nivens, the character Betty White played to a turn on The Mary Tyler Moore Show. She's softer, though, a gullible sexpot who's as shaky as Rose on the reality principle.

In the first episode of the series, Blanche agrees to marry a smooth-talking tailor's dummy she has known for a week. Maybe he looks good to her because in Miami, as Dorothy observes, "All the single men under 80 are cocaine smugglers."

The fourth member of the household, Dorothy's mother, Sophia, moves in unexpectedly when her retirement home burns down. No one was hurt, she announces, but the incident upset the residents, what with all the bells ringing and the firemen rushing around. "Do you know what that does to hearts that beat only a few times a week?"

Played by Estelle Getty, Sophia is an 80-year-old with a talent for acid one-liners. A stroke destroyed the part of her brain that censors what she says. Though she doesn't come much higher than Bea Arthur's hip, she can go three rounds with her daughter, whose own tongue could cut a board, or anybody else around.

"You must be Blanche's sister," says Blanche's suitor to Sophia, coming to pick Blanche up for a date.

"You must be blind," Sophia snaps. Whether she's cheating at Scrabble, munching junk food or bluntly describing the workings of her bladder, Getty's comic timing is such that she cracks up even the show's cameramen, no matter how many times they've heard the same joke.

I asked Getty, a tiny woman with shrewd eyes and an impish grin, if she were going to walk away with The Golden Girls. Of course not, she protested. How could she, with the likes of her three co-stars around, brilliant actresses every one. "I couldn't walk away with it. But that doesn't mean that I'm not going to try to steal it."

As if she'd said something imprudent, she then described, at length, the selfless cooperation among the four principals. There were no jealousies among them, she said; her co-stars were "too professional for that." Any of the four would give one of her lines to another, "if it's good for the show." No ego problems ever darkened the artificial sunshine of the set.

It sounded too good to be true, but while no one gave away a line while I was around, rehearsals largely bore her out. This particular gang of four is either a mutual-admiration society or better actresses, even, than we thought.

They called each other "dear," "darling," "sweetheart" and "honey." Watching a clip of Betty White performing a solo scene, the other three cried, "Maaaarvelous!" The only hint I got that three of them may be watching their backs was an admission by Rue McClanahan. Was everybody really all that happy? I asked her. "Let's say we'd all like to be playing Sophia," she said, smiling a noticeably tight smile.

It's clear that this show isn't hurting for acting skills, or for a fresh format, or, God knows, for jokes. They pile on top of one another like sheep trying to crowd through a gate, many of them more ribald than any we've heard before on prime-time TV. The first episode contained incontinence jokes, bawdy allusions to Blanche's sexual appetites and a male cook in the household who's flamingly gay, an escapee from "La Cage aux Folles."

A stereotype, albeit a funny one, Coco, the cook (played by Charles Levin), was dropped from subsequent episodes. The reason wasn't pressure from homosexual groups, creator-writer Susan Harris said, but because it was tough enough to write for four strong actresses who "filled up the stage" without thinking up lines for yet one more character. For the half hour in which he flitted across America's TV screens, Coco nonetheless almost certainly offended some people.

That prospect didn't ruffle Harris. Nor does she expect older viewers, or younger ones, for that matter, to take offense at the series' raucous approach to its subject, growing older. The aging face serious problems, such as failing health, job discrimination, poverty and loneliness. The Golden Girls will deal with these head-on. "Comedy is the least → threatening way to deal with problems," however. "It's easiest for people to accept ideas if the way they're presented is funny. What I'm hoping for is a blend of laughter and tears," Harris said.

Adding that "the best humor is based in truth," she predicted that older people will respond to the show because their funny bones are no more arthritic than those of the young. It's a note that Arthur, White, McClanahan and Getty sounded as well, in interchangeable interviews and four-part harmony.

All four actresses said they jumped at the chance to be part of this series because it portrays older people as intelligent, lively and still attractive. All said it was about time TV depicted such people positively, rather than as senile old geezers and L.O.L.s. And all four not only refused to tell me how old they are, they refused to tell me how old the characters they play are supposed to be.

Bea Arthur said she thought the women were first conceived of as being in their 60s, "but after the show was cast, they were seen as younger."

Betty White, who projects the same good humor off-stage as on, said tentatively that she thought "somebody might be in her 50s."

Rue McClanahan said she had no idea how old Blanche was and that it didn't matter. "We have more important things to worry about, such as getting the show on the air."

Estelle Getty not only doesn't talk about how old she is, she doesn't disclose her height. Instead, she tells anyone who asks that she's "as tall as you want me to be."

Gingerly backing away from a sensitive issue, I mentioned to them that the friendship between the characters they play was particularly convincing. Was this because they were friends in private life, or simply because they were such old pros?

Bea Arthur gave me a look that shattered the crystal of my watch. "Old?" she asked pointedly. I rephrased that "mature pros" and wondered where the closest place in Hollywood was to get a tetanus booster shot.

What we have here, then, is the first series whose premise is: Where your age doesn't matter unless you're a cheese. We also have four highly accomplished, attractive female leads who are decidedly skittish on the subject. The paradox suggests that NBC, whose idea this show was, has a job of work ahead.

Ours is a youth-worshipping culture, the current flurry of interest in older people notwithstanding. TV's last bunch of highly bankable "golden girls" was Charlie's Angels. It's going to take a major shift in perceptions to convince us that women, even more so than men, don't lose their sex appeal shortly after they lose their baby fat.

Have network execs themselves really made this mental leap? On one hand, they've thrown money at this show as if they had their own printing presses. The set is built to withstand earthquakes and the ages: when someone slams a door, the walls don't shake. The refrigerator is full of food. You could move into this house and live in comfort, bringing along only your toothbrush. On the other hand, the show's buried in a Saturday night time slot, when audiences are likely to be out boogeying or playing bingo. Still, the show's time slot didn't hurt the premiere episode, which ranked No. 1 in the ratings, attracting 43 per cent of the audience; 40 per cent tuned in for the second episode.

If this keeps up, The Golden Girls may go a long way toward making a case for life after puberty. When I watched a taping with a mixed-generation audience, Yuppies and geriatric types alike found its four stars and its forthrightness enormously funny.

In the segment we saw, the house is burglarized. Timid Rose worries that the burglars were looking for drugs. "We have Maalox and estrogen," Dorothy tells her wearily, in Bea Arthur's sonic boom of a baritone. "How many junkies have gas and hot flashes?" END

Secrets of Vitality

No Excuses! Keep on Trying!

This celebrated actress tells what keeps her active and achieving well into her 70s

By Katharine Hepburn

The pursuit of life. Vitality. What is it? The Oxford says: power, hold on life, the ability to continue the vital functions, persistent energy.

Now, persistent energy—what is it? Oxford says: to continue firmly or absolutely (in opinion, course, doing) especially against remonstrance.

What do I consider my vitality at an age when I should be displaying better sense? —Well, what is it? First, physical vitality: that which makes me clean that room—dig that flower bed. —Well, now, come on Kath, you didn't actually dig it. You couldn't. You just could not step on that fork hard enough with your messed up ankle. —Well, yes, brother Bob is visiting and he dug it—then in I got. My hands are strong— I can sift and get out the old crab-grass roots and dump in the topsoil and humus and peat and manure, and mix them with the sand. I can crawl through the flower bed—weed. Yes, and I can crawl along the floor—do all the "under things" work. Limited vitality, certainly, but better than nothing.

The pursuit of pleasure. New rules for tennis: hit it to me; I play the singles court, you the doubles; second bounce is OK for me. —Better than nothing.

The pursuit of excitement. Careful on balance. Remember when I used to jump from the 4-foot railing on the pier to the end of the springboard and do a one-and-a-half? —Oh, yes. Yes, I did. Now . . . the other day I swam over to the pier, and I started to walk out that springboard—semi-low tide—my God. I nearly fell off. So high: 8 feet. So narrow: 16 inches. Someone! Please hold my hand. But I got to the end—I dove. . . . No, that didn't bother me. Hadn't bothered me to dive off that boat in "On Golden Pond." First dive in 30 years. Diving—part of my life style. I did it. I can do it. But now—wow! Well, physical vitality—lifting, crawling, hitting, running—we can't push the cart faster than the cart is capable of going.

Now we try or we don't try, that is vitality of the spirit.

No vitality: I don't believe I can even think about that. I do not have the push to do that. I would like to do it, though. But I don't believe I can. I'm not going to try—no—it's no use.

Vitality: Oh, yes. I'll do that—absolutely. I'll do it. No question. I'll try.

Lack of vitality is a terrible lack. It can mean that you just don't try. Sometimes you have a choice—to try or not to try. And you can't make yourself try. It's that negative attitude and just a terrible habit. Well, . . . I just . . . can't . . .

Wait a minute. Don't say "well" to me. No. No excuses. Think of the big ones:

John Bryson/Sygma

Roosevelt had infantile paralysis. It didn't keep him down. Nothing could. Only death. He worked with what was left him: his head, his humor, his heart. And it made him a much richer and more generous creature. He'd had an experience very few have. It made him sensitive to the desperation of man. He had a project.

Helen Keller: deaf, blind. She pursued life. She had a project. She made new senses.

Mother Teresa: she is unique. No self problems; she lives entirely for others.

Joan of Arc: she had a vision; she pursued it.

George Bernard Shaw: he worked and worked and worked. He said he only hoped that when he died he would be all used up. (Being a fan of his, I don't like that man in the back row who is whispering, "Well, he certainly was.")

Nathan Hale: hanged at 21. "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country."

Winston Churchill: "We shall not flag or fail. We shall fight in France, we shall fight on the seas and oceans, we shall fight with growing confidence and growing strength in the air, we shall defend our island, whatever the cost may be, we shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills; we shall never surrender."

It's thrilling, isn't it? That pursuit.

He led us all.

I remember when I was in Hollywood, early on, in the '30s. I used to play tennis with Bill Tilden. He was absolutely fascinating on the subject of winning. He said you could spot a winner. And you could also spot a very fine player who was not destined to be a winner.

It's how hard can you try, isn't it? The pursuit. I was always impressed by the men who even earlier on were thrilled by the possibilities of the motion picture and who worked to make it the extraordinary business that it is. Sam Goldwyn, Louis B. Mayer, Harry Cohn. They were brilliant businessmen—very hard workers. But inside, there was a sensitive and romantic yearning for the magic of love and laughter and the pursuit of whatever seemed to be the light at the end of the tunnel. Get the story; get the director; get the actors; put it all together; sell it.

We're surrounded by opportunities, aren't we? Isn't it exciting? Little opportunities, big opportunities. All of us. How can we make it better? How can we make it best? For him. For her. For us. The pursuit of perfection. We may not get there, but we can try. That's vitality. That's the pursuit of life itself. Isn't it? END

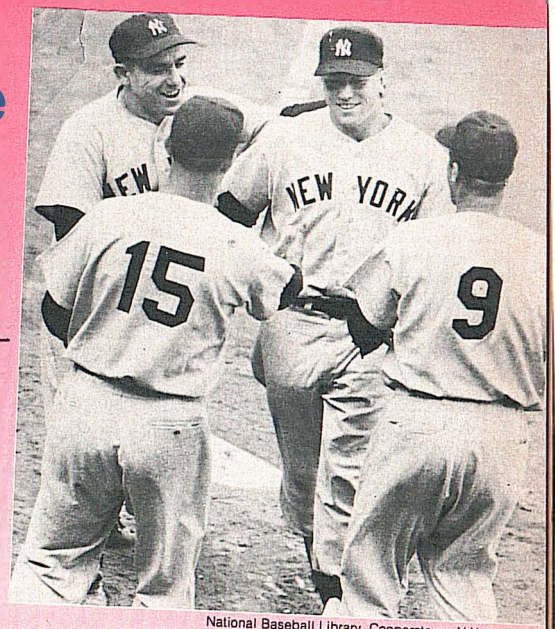
The World Series Game That Made Mickey Mantle Cry

In the 12 Series in which he played, the legendary Yankee slugger had some dramatic ups and downs

By Mickey Mantle
with Herb Gluck



National Baseball Library, Cooperstown, N.Y.

Above, l.-r., a Mantle-piece of Series highlights: the Mick snagging a fly in '62, with Bobby Richardson (1) and Roger Maris converging; whacking a game-winning homer off Barney Schultz in '64; and getting the glad hand from Hank Bauer (9), Joe Collins (15) and Yogi Berra after a grand slam in '53.

ABC will telecast the 1985 World Series, with Game 1 set for Saturday, Oct. 19, at 8 P.M. (ET). See "Sports Calendar" for game times and channel in your area.

1951 was my rookie year as a New York Yankee. That same year I got hurt playing in the World Series. You might remember: Willie Mays of the New York Giants hit a high pop fly toward right center. I went for it and my spikes caught on a drainage hole buried in the outfield grass. So I wound up at Lenox Hill Hospital with torn ligaments. But what you probably don't remember is that after they operated, I watched the Series on a little black-and-white television set alongside my bed.

I can tell you, under the circumstances, it was an enjoyable experience, especially when Hank Bauer hit a bases-loaded triple and led our guys to a world championship in six games.

Television. It really started getting big during the Subway Series between us and the Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers. Yes, 1951 to 1953 was like nothing else before. A tremendous amount of coverage, with media people coming in from everywhere, and at old Ebbets Field the press boxes filled up so fast they had to put a lot of reporters in the stands.

Another thing I remember about Brooklyn: if you were the star of the game they'd take you down this long runway to a makeshift television studio located in the back of a beer joint. And you'd sit there beneath the hot lights, the sweat pouring through your uniform while you talked. I did it a couple of times, then kind of begged off. Besides, those Brooklyn fans were mean. I'd walk past them and they'd be waiting: "Hey Mantle, ya bum, ya!"

So it gave me a real thrill to hit a pair of home runs and help beat the Dodgers in the '52 Series. Fact is, nothing that followed was a bigger thrill. I was young. I felt like a king. How often can you feel that way with the same intensity?

In 1955 and '56 it was us and the Dodgers again. A split. In '57 we took on the Milwaukee Braves. There, at County Stadium, I was hurt when pitcher Bob Buhl tried to pick me off second. I dove for the bag. The throw went wild and Red Schoendienst fell across my right shoulder. The painful mix-up forced me to miss the fifth and sixth games. But that's baseball. What I recall is an interesting sidelight.

We were riding the Yankee bus from a practice spot called Browns Lake Resort to County Stadium. A local reporter sat among us. A nice enough guy. But pretty soon our trainer, Gus Mauch, is yelling at him. "Yeah, you're bush! The city is bush! Bush league all the way!"

The guy wrote it up, and it must have given the Braves an incentive because they beat us in seven games. It turned into a grudge battle that continued the next year. Well, after being down three games to one, we came back and finally scalped the Braves. A great Series.

Our most disappointing? No question, it was against Pittsburgh in 1960, when Bill Mazeroski hit a line-drive shot over the left-field fence in the bottom half of the ninth inning of the seventh game. I can still see Yogi Berra moving toward it as the ball kept going, going, going . . . We walked off the field like zombies. It was the one time I really thought the better team had lost.

On a plane heading home for Dallas, my wife tried to comfort me. No use; I couldn't stop crying. She finally said, "Mickey, it's only a game." Maybe so. But just then I felt as bad as I've felt in my whole life.

Which takes us to 1961, the year of the Mantle-Maris home-run derby. And by mid-September we couldn't go anywhere without being followed by a horde of TV and radio people. Now Roger Maris and I were zeroing in on Babe Ruth's record of 60 homers, so the tension was getting almost unbearable, at least for Roger. On top of which I also had a very bad head cold.

Well, a doctor in New York gave me → an injection to clear it up. It didn't work. What it did was put me in the hospital with an abscessed hip.

I got into two or three more games, and ended the season with 54 homers. Roger passed the Babe on the last day of the season, hitting No. 61 off Red Sox pitcher Tracy Stallard. I saw him wave his cap at the stadium crowd. Saw him on TV—from my hospital bed, of course. I only got six at-bats in the Series, in which we beat the Cincinnati Reds, 4 games to 1.

Memories. Of the '62 Series, it's a sudden recollection of San Francisco, and a slashing rain that fell continuously for three days. We had to practice farther down the coast. Then, finally, the skies brightened and helicopters were brought in to dry the Candlestick Park turf. We won that Series against the Giants in seven games, but were swept by the Los Angeles Dodgers the next year.

In 1964 we faced the Cardinals. Let's go back to the night before Game 3, to something you didn't see unless you were in The Plaza hotel watching singer Kay Starr do her act. Then you would have seen me arriving with my friend Harold Youngman. The place was jammed, and they got us a table right in front of the stage. Well, I must have been a little under the weather from lifting a glass too many somewhere else on the town, because during one of Kay's songs my head began to swim.

Anyway, Harold told me later that she had a spotlight thrown at our table. A nice introduction: "Ladies and gentlemen, I want to welcome a fellow Oklahoman, a fellow we all know and I'm sure we respect and love. Let's hear it for Mickey Mantle!"

Harold says I started to get up and fell on the floor, cockeyed drunk.

Thankfully, nobody reported it. And you can bet I came into the third game sober as a judge. The only thing is, along about the fifth inning Cardinal catcher Tim McCarver took an extra base off my throwing error and eventually scored the tying run on Curt Simmons' single.

Then came the bottom of the ninth. I was still so angry over the error that when knuckleball pitcher Barney Schultz served the first one up to the plate I clobbered it into the third deck.

What the hell, they won the championship anyhow.

Well, there you have it. A total of twelve Series, from 1951 to 1964. And to think that way back at the beginning of my career, hardly anyone in my home town of Commerce, Okla., owned a television set—mostly, I guess, because they couldn't afford it.

Naturally, as TV became more and more widespread, everything came to a standstill while everyone watched what was happening between the Yankees and our National League rivals. And that really added to the pressure, because I knew the folks at home were watching!

And today, it seems the whole world is. With it, a brand-new technology: minicameras, different lenses, all kinds of stuff. You see, I'm beginning to learn. This year I did color commentary for SportsChannel in New York. I like to observe the technical aspects of the business when I'm not watching the action down on the field.

Then you have instant replay. It's great. I did a Yankee game for SportsChannel where we had a balk called. Well, it didn't look like a balk to me. But they put it on instant replay and sure enough, plain as could be, you saw the pitcher stepping toward first base. No, he didn't balk.

Well, you can't win them all, even on television. Which leads me to a final thought. When I retired from baseball, NBC hired me to do some color commentary for the 1969 Mets-Orioles World Series. I went on with Curt Gowdy and Tony Kubek, and right off I picked the Orioles to win four in a row. You guessed it—the Mets beat them four out of five.

Nonetheless, I was comfortable, though I kind of felt I should have worn a sweatshirt with the word FILL-IN written across the front. Because almost invariably Gowdy and Kubek would pass the microphone back and forth to each other and I would sit there and smile. (END)

60 Minutes' creator remembers some of the most revealing comments made on the show

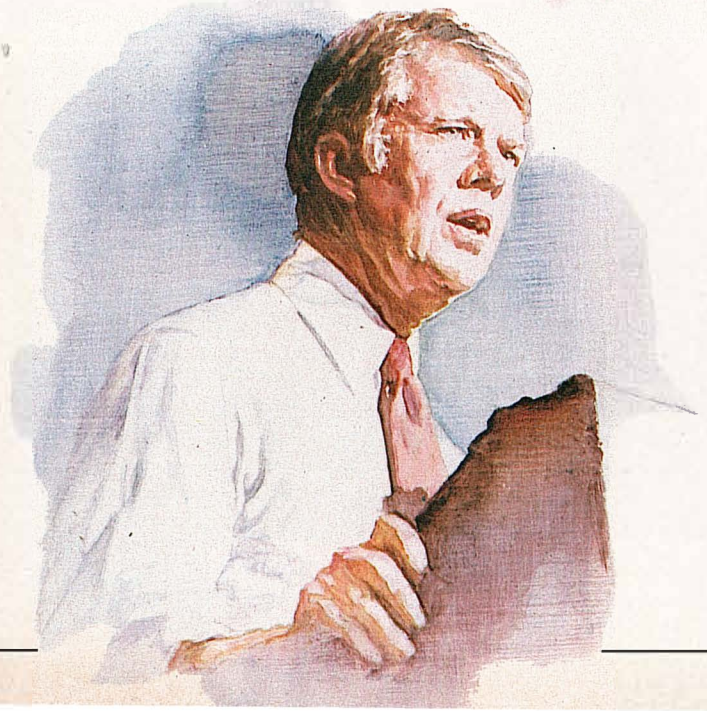
Jimmy Carter
August 10, 1980
Dan Rather: Mr. President, you recently directed your staff to make report cards on their employees. Now, in specific areas, I'm going to ask you to grade yourself A through F. Foreign policy?
Carter: You put me on the spot. I would say maybe a B or a C-plus. . . . Let's say B-minus.
Rather: Overall domestic policy?
Carter: Under the circumstances, I think about a B. . . maybe a C.
Rather: And on leadership?
Carter: . . . maybe a B.



Mr. and Mrs. Richard Burton
March 24, 1970
Elizabeth Taylor: Fighting . . . is one of the greatest exercises in marital togetherness.
Burton: [But] you do not attack the weak parts . . . .
Taylor: You bloody well have.
Burton: She's got a slightly fat belly . . .
Taylor: . . . your pockmarks, you know.
Burton: We can attack these things, but they're superficial.
Taylor: No, there are ethics in fighting.

Arthur Fiedler
November 26, 1978
Morley Safer: Pops—there are really two of them: the orchestra [called] the Boston Pops; and "Pops" himself, Arthur Fiedler, who's been conducting that orchestra for almost 50 years. . . .
If you believe what you read about Arthur Fiedler, people will tell you that he's curmudgeonly, mean, a skinflint, has got a terrible temper. Can that be true?
Fiedler: I think all those things are more or less true, yes. . . .
Safer: [But] you would think that a man who gets [as much adulation as you get] would be in love with people.
Fiedler: Well, I think a great number of people are bores, really, and the adulation—just words. →

John Le Carré
January 29, 1978
Le Carré: The taxi driver says, "What do you do for a living?" I said, "I'm a writer." He said, "What have you wrote?" I said, "The Spy That Came in from the Cold." He said, "I know that." He said, "That had Richard Burton in it, and the dog sniffed out the World Cup." . . . I said, "I'm terribly sorry. It's nothing of the sort. It had Richard Burton and—and Claire Bloom." And he said, "I took my wife to that, and I'm beginning to think you're not who you say you are."

Ashe: One day, I think not too far in the distant future, there will be many, many more black tennis players playing . . . and they won't talk like me and they won't look like me and they won't act like me and they won't dress like me and they're going to upset a whole lot of people. →

Anne Morrow Lindbergh
April 20, 1980
Morley Safer: Just three months after Pearl Harbor [Charles Lindbergh] made a speech saying the British, FDR and the Jews were trying to get us into a war.
Lindbergh: I was horrified. . . . I said, "I think it's worse to rouse anti-Semitism in the country, much worse than war." He was not a great reader. Had he read Goebbels and Hitler, he would have known that people who are really anti-Semitic start with these statements.
Safer: Did you love him less for that?
Lindbergh: I can't say I did, but I pitied him.

Garson Kanin
October 8, 1978
Kanin: Of all the dangerous and destructive "isms" that have plagued this century, ageism is the most stupid. . . . There's a story of a town in Connecticut that lost its power, had a complete outage. And they simply could not repair it [until] someone remembered that there was an old, old electrical engineer, who had installed the system in the first place, and he was living in some retirement community, and they sent for him. And he came along and he got a little mallet out and he went all through the [plant] and he went tap, tap, tap on a switch and all the lights came on. He sent the town a bill . . . for $1000.02 . . . itemized as follows: Tapping, 2¢. Knowing where to tap, $1000. END

Misfitting Right In

Twenty-four seconds that shook the world! Well, Courteney Cox's world, anyway: in Bruce Springsteen's video for "Dancing in the Dark," Cox (above) emerges from the audience and dances—for not quite half a minute—with The Boss. "Everything else led from that one appearance," she says. Sixteen months later, she's the female lead of NBC's Misfits of Science. But who knows what The Boss hath wrought? As Gloria, a young woman with telekinetic powers, Cox is saddled with problems that would baffle the best of us. "I'm not all that crazy about being born with these powers," says Courteney/Gloria. In fact, Gloria was actually something of a juvenile delinquent. "My character kind of tore apart this department store she was working in." As for the eternal question, will you use your powers for good or evil, Cox replies: "They work very well on guns and people."

What Price TV Stardom?

James Coco knows. The actor, sometimes seen as Tony Danza's father-in-law on ABC's Who's the Boss?, was in Las Vegas recently on a publicity tour. While playing a slot machine at his hotel, Coco (above left, with Danza) was asked for his autograph. As he was signing, another hotel guest played "his" machine—and promptly won $42,000 with a single pull of the lever.

If They Could See Him Now

"I guess I just don't have the kind of face anyone wants to see," jokes Anthony Daniels (above), the actor best known for playing C-3PO—from inside a robot suit—in the "Star Wars" movies. Providing Threepio's voice for ABC's Ewoks/Droids Adventure Hour, then, was a pleasant diversion. "It was wonderful not to wear the costume," he says. "And great to have eye contact with the other actors." Well, maybe not always so great. "When I said my lines, I held my arms and legs straight out and rigid out of habit. I think the other actors thought I was absolutely mad."

Off to See The Blizzard?

On paper, the plan sounds great. Next month, Andy Williams will pack off to Rovaniemi, Finland—a picturesque town up near the Arctic Circle—with a dozen or so cute TV kids in tow and do his umpteenth Christmas show for NBC. In actuality? Well, "they told us that in November there are only four or five hours of daylight, and it's very cold [there]," says executive producer Pierre Cossette. "The clothing we're taking comes in nine layers." That being the case, maybe it wasn't such a hot idea to ask about the possibility of a major Arctic snowstorm coinciding with the show's shooting schedule. "I wish you hadn't brought that up," says Cossette. (Below left: Ami Foster, Williams, Keshia Knight-Pulliam and Casey Ellison.)

Cook's Tour

Filming Tender Is the Night (Oct. 27, Showtime) in nearly a dozen French and Swiss locations gave Sean Young (above, right) plenty of chances to sample the local haute cuisine. Being a hard-working young actress, though, she never had the energy to enjoy much of it. "My mom was with me," says Young. "And she and Piper [co-star Piper Laurie] went out all the time together. They had a great time. I was always so tired after shooting all day that I just didn't feel like it. I would go eat bread and cheese in my hotel room."

Accentuating the Positive

You figure it out. In Kane & Abel (Nov. 17-19, CBS), Abel—an East European who immigrates to the U.S.—is played by American actor Peter Strauss (below, right). His great rival, Kane—who was brought up in a rich Boston household—is played by New Zealander Sam Neill (below, left), who starred in PBS's Reilly: Ace of Spies. "Actually," says Neill, "a New Zealand accent is very much like a Boston accent. We both say 'Hahvahd Yahd' about the same." Still, Neill worked with a voice coach on the miniseries. A good voice coach. "After we finished," he says, "she flew to Bermuda to work with Julio Iglesias."

The Long and Short of It

CBS doesn't have all the Ewings in its corral. Later this season, 7-foot New York Knicks star Patrick Ewing will appear on ABC's Webster, along with his college coach, Georgetown's John Thompson, to instruct 3'7" Webster Long (Emmanuel Lewis, with Ewing, above) in the fine art of the full-court press. Any thought on those Ewings over on Dallas, Patrick? "I'm the original Ewing," he says. We won't argue.

The Magic Of Penn And Teller

They are a throwback to vaudeville, and a magic act for people who hate magicians. Penn Jillette (near right) is the tall, rumpled, bespectacled half of the duo. He does all the talking. The diminutive Teller (far right) is the silent partner. He talks to the press, but not to the audience. After 11 years on the road together, they have become overnight successes, playing to packed houses off-Broadway, doing Late Night with David Letterman—and this week, headlining "Penn & Teller Go Public" (Oct. 23 on most PBS stations), a TV adaptation of their stage show. Later this season, they'll appear on the 11th-season opener of Saturday Night Live and star in four specials for The Disney Channel.

"The way we work," says Teller, "is we get an idea for some piece of neat stuff and then we go out and learn how to do it." The neat stuff in their PBS special includes Teller's attempted escape from a straitjacket while hanging upside down high above the stage; and a sequence where Penn eats fire. In short, these guys are not your garden-variety magicians. "One of the things we've always fought very hard against," says Teller, "is an attitude people have developed about magicians—and rightly so—that the magician is their enemy." Or as Penn puts it: "Magicians try desperately to say: 'I can do this, you can't, you're a jerk'." Their PBS special features a card trick, some dazzling sleight-of-hand and even an illusion you can do at home. But unlike other TV magicians, Penn and Teller actually explain to the audience exactly how these tricks are done. Indeed, both point with pride that "there's not one magic trick" in the show. "We never end up fooling the audience."

Andrea Hall-Lovell used to play Samantha Evans—opposite her twin sister, Deidre Hall—on NBC's Days of Our Lives. Nowadays, though, you'll find her in the executive suite. Hall-Lovell runs a firm that markets soap-related items such as T-shirts, coffee mugs and beach towels. Her company, Puppytracks, represents DOOL, Santa Barbara, The Young and the Restless and Capitol—and is hotly pursuing other clients. Given all that, who has time for acting?

A Fountain Of Youth ↑

Forget the fact that he's really in his mid-30s. Don Scardino, who portrays the boyish Dr. Chris Chapin on NBC's Another World, has fashioned quite a career in daytime playing guys who are much younger. Lately, though, Scardino (above, with his AW co-star Jane Cameron) has been making his mark directing plays off-Broadway. "People have always thought of me as the perennial kid," he says. "I was always playing the kid who says, 'Gee, can I have the keys to the car, Dad?' When I became a director, however, I became 'dad' overnight." Welcome to the middle ages, Don.

On camera, Ed Moore (right) plays scheming ex-con Harry Sowolsky on ABC's Loving. Off camera, Moore is a noted playwright—a Drama Desk Award winner for his 1974 opus, "The Sea Horse." Moore says he began writing plays while in acting class—to have starring vehicles for himself: "I love doing both, acting and writing, but I agonize when I write. And I'd rather not agonize." Not that he's going to stop, though. Moore's newest play, an offbeat love story entitled "The Bicycle Man," is scheduled to open in New York later this season.

Czechmate!

The upset victories of Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova (above) and Ivan Lendl in last month's U.S. Open prompted a certain amount of grousing, most notably from John McEnroe, Lendl's victim in the men's final. McEnroe—who's no fan of TV's tennis coverage to start with—said television hurt the Open by forcing players (read: Mac himself) to play semifinal and final matches on consecutive days. Mandlikova disagrees: "Do you think he would have said that if he won? If you are a professional athlete with millions of people watching you," she says, "you must put up with these things. He put up with it the years he was winning and didn't complain." . . . Over on the NFL beat, CBS's John Madden has been gazing into his crystal ball. He doesn't think the players' union will strike when its contract with the NFL owners expires after the '86 season. "I think the players have learned from the last strike [in 1982]," says Madden. "The fans aren't going to put up with this crap any more." In fact, he says the owners are already positioning themselves for negotiations. "They cut down the roster size [from 49 to 45 players] so they'll have something to give back to the players. The owners are constantly reminding anyone who will listen how hard it is to turn a profit. All this propaganda is actually a form of negotiating." . . . Another ex-coach turned analyst, NBC's Sam Rutigliano (below), says he has no plans whatsoever to return to the sidelines. In fact, the former Cleveland Browns head coach is still miffed—from last year—at people who had him taking over for Kay Stephenson at Buffalo. "I'm not going to talk to anybody," Rutigliano insists. "I've made a commitment to myself, my family and NBC."

REVIEWS

Remember the days when rock stars wore coats and ties and were greeted at international airports by thousands of screaming young girls? Such was the heyday of English rock explored in two new tapes. British Rock: The First Wave (MusicVision; $29.95) is an absorbing hour that touches on many groups: from the Rolling Stones and Kinks to the less durable Herman's Hermits and Freddie and the Dreamers. While the program reflects the era's musical creativity, it seems padded with too many reaction shots of fans crying for their young heroes. . . . The Beatles: Live (Sony Video Software; $16.95) features Paul, John, Ringo and George (above, l.-r.) belting out their early hits in an energetic 1965 studio concert. This tape isn't fancy: it's just the Beatles singing virtually nonstop for 20 minutes.

NEW RELEASES

Jane Fonda's New Workout (Karl/Lorimar Home Video; $39.95): the fifth exercise tape from the First Lady of bending and stretching, Jane Fonda (right).

Ladyhawke (Warner Home Video; $79.95): dandy tale of medieval derring-do, with Rutger Hauer and Michelle Pfeiffer as really star-crossed lovers.

The Discreet Charm of the Bourgeoisie (Media Home Entertainment; $59.95): Luis Bunuel's surrealistic French farce was 1972's Oscar-winning Best Foreign-Language Film.

Rustlers' Rhapsody (Paramount Home Video; $79.95): Tom Berenger in a rowdy spoof of Hollywood Westerns. (END)

News Update

NBC Cuts Risk in Olympics Deal

NBC's $300-million deal for exclusive U.S. broadcast rights to the 1988 Summer Olympics from Seoul, South Korea, contains some hedges for the network and some face-saving for the Koreans, who had demanded $500-million during the bidding. Fears of a potential Olympic boycott meant that none of the three U.S. networks was able to find an insurance company willing to cover its investment in the Games. Thus, NBC built its protection into the payment schedule: about 75 per cent of the network's license fee won't be paid until after the Games have started, according to NBC Sports president Arthur Watson. If one of the major competitors didn't show up, NBC's fee would be reduced.

A controversial aspect of the deal is NBC's agreement to share with the Koreans as much as $200-million of the network's Olympic advertising revenue. But executives at ABC and CBS doubt that the revenue-sharing plan will amount to more than a "way to make the deal look better" for the Koreans. Watson declined to specify the formula for the plan, but did confirm that it would be "very difficult" for them to receive more than the $300-million base fee. —Doug Hill

Action Series Slump in Early Ratings

Though post-season baseball will distort the prime-time ratings picture until November, a few trends have emerged. Several heretofore successful action/adventure shows are meeting unaccustomed resistance: NBC's The A-Team and Riptide, CBS's Simon & Simon (whose premiere episode lost its time period to NBC's combination of Cheers and Night Court for the first time) and ABC's The Fall Guy. The latter is in serious trouble, though the network has a full season's worth of episodes on order. "When shows like this drop," says an executive, "they drop like a rock."

In general, it looks like a long season ahead for ABC, which may need to go to its bullpen often. The network has scored at 8 on Tuesday nights with Who's the Boss? and Growing Pains, but hasn't capitalized in the same time period on Wednesdays with The Insiders.

—Richard Turner

CBS Scrambles Signal

CBS has begun scrambling its satellite-delivered signal to its affiliates, making it impossible for owners of home dishes to pick up the network's shows. George Schweitzer, a CBS vice-president, says the network wants to protect its affiliate relations, adding, "We're not in the direct-broadcast business."

Split Decision

"Stranded" is the apt title of an NBC TV-movie in which Burt Reynolds was to have directed his girl friend Loni Anderson. The couple's last-minute decision to quit over what a network spokesman calls "creative differences" has left the project in limbo. Anderson was to star as a businesswoman whose fierce rivalry with a male colleague turns to love after the two are (you guessed it) stranded on a desert island. The differences arose over who should play the male lead: Reynolds and his leading lady wanted one actor, while NBC executives insisted on another. The upshot: Burt and Loni won't be going to Tahiti, where location shooting was to begin next month.

Family Portrait

Look closely at the Oct. 31 episode of Magnum, P.I., and you'll spot Tom Selleck's father, Bob, in a cameo. The elder Selleck was in Hawaii visiting his son recently when the producers decided to cast him as Magnum's grandfather. The show finds the detective visiting his mother and stepfather (Gwen Verdon, David Huddleston) back home in Virginia, where his grandpa turns up in a home movie.

Observe the 'No Feuding' Sign

Though they are co-stars on Falcon Crest, Ana Alicia and Morgan Fairchild had never even met until both were about to catch the same flight for location shooting in California's Napa Valley. After exchanging hellos, they tried to get seats together on the plane. But the ticket clerk said he had strict instructions to keep the actresses apart because he'd been told they hated each other. "We hadn't even met," says Alicia, "and already there was a rumor we were enemies. Even when we made it clear we were getting along, they still refused to seat us together. Morgan had to sit in front of me, but she managed to talk the whole way there, and we became great friends."

Come Back At 40, Kid

Former Love Boat star Lauren Tewes almost had a chance to return to series television when NBC showed interest in a sitcom pilot in which Tewes and Vicki Lawrence played friends who run a beauty salon. NBC is still interested in the show (called "What Are Friends For?") but wants to replace Tewes. The reason, say insiders, is that Tewes, at 31, is considered too young to play the mother of teen-age children. Oh, well, at least she'll never be too old for The Love Boat: our sources say that show's producers have been asking about Tewes' future availability.

Grape Gripe

Although ABC's new sitcom Growing Pains has started the season with good Nielsen ratings, star Alan Thicke is groaning in pain from the critics' reactions. "The same guys who nailed me on Thicke of the Night," he says, "nailed me on this before the show even aired. I may have offended too many by that braggadocio ad campaign [for TOTN]. Even I used to refer to the show as 'Sick of the Hype.' But it's got to the stage where I could find the cure for cancer and they'd ask what took me so long."

JUST TELLING IT LIKE IT IS

Thanks for the extensive excerpts from Howard Cosell's new book ["This Time Howard Out-Cosells Himself," Sept. 28]. I had almost forgotten what an insufferable lout the man is.

Ralph Dannheisser
Silver Spring, Md.

I have, in the past, found Mr. Cosell's use (and misuse) of patronizingly pretentious polysyllables to be amusing, feeling that no one could be that self-satisfied and that he must be putting us on. However, his smugly ungenerous criticisms of his former colleagues' abilities show that assumption to have been erroneous. He really does believe that he is better than the rest of the world!

Margaret W. Kennedy
Menands, N.Y.

After 15 years of watching Monday Night Football, my memory of events suggests that it was Howard rather than Frank Gifford, et al., who committed the really egregious interpretive gaffes. It also seems to me that Gifford and Don Meredith were most circumspect in correcting Howard so as not to bruise his tender ego. The jury is still out on O.J. Simpson and Joe Namath—both of whom could benefit from a little grammatical coaching—but I suspect that Gifford will lead them to respectability, if not to stardom.

Jim Lashbrook
Black Creek, Wis.

Thanks to Howard Cosell's candor, the curtain of silence has finally been lifted on Frank Gifford's egregious play-calling. I have always said Gifford must have a relative or friend at the top.

Herman S. King
Grafton, Va.

Mr. Cosell's criticism of Frank Gifford's voice is the most ludicrous piece of writing of our time. I think we have just witnessed the writing of The Great American Snivel.

Sue Powell
Pleasant Hill, Cal.

THANKS, PARDNER

As a fan of Cagney & Lacey, I was very surprised and disappointed when Tyne Daly failed to name and acknowledge her co-star and fellow nominee, Sharon Gless, during her Emmy acceptance speech. As everyone knows, the show would not even be on the air today if Sharon Gless had not agreed to replace Meg Foster as Chris Cagney. After all, Cagney & Lacey is a show about partnership.

America's best loved TV series begins Saturday. With luck, it will continue through Thursday and into next weekend. We can't give you the names of the stars and we have no synopsis, but what difference does that make? We're talking World Series. Enough said.

ABC may hold the ace of diamonds this week, but PBS comes mighty close to a royal flush, with two notable series premieres, the first half of a magnificent portrait of Laurence Olivier and an imaginative hour-long cartoon designed to help children and their parents cope with an all-too-common domestic upheaval. Stand by your VCRs Sunday and Thursday, when drama and baseball are (or could be) in conflict.

Masterpiece Theatre opens its 15th season with The Last Place on Earth, a dramatization of the historic expeditions to the South Pole of Robert Falcon Scott (Martin Shaw) and Roald Amundsen (Sverre Anker Ousdal) in 1911-12.

The outcome of their race across Antarctica—success for the Norwegian, disaster and death for the Englishman—is too well-known to provide a fulcrum of suspense for this six-part epic, and so the producers have concentrated their creative genius as much on physical reconstruction of the treks as on the dynamics of the explorers' competition.

For drama, they have relied on a number of personality conflicts between each of the captains and his subordinates, and on a character study of Scott, who is taken down several notches from the heroic pinnacle where he has usually been enshrined. Hewing to the portrait of Scott given by Roland Huntford in "Scott and Amundsen" (the book on which the miniseries is based), this production represents him as a moody egotist whose style of leadership cost him the good will of many of his best men.

Last Place is distinguished in so many ways—in its luminous performances, its exquisite design, its brilliant cinematography, its thrilling authenticity—that one feels almost boorish registering a complaint. Nevertheless, a serious complaint must be made: the midsection of the miniseries bears far too close a resemblance to . . . well, yes, to an endless trudge across Antarctica. In episodes three and four, the ice upstages the cast and freezes interest into a snow-blind stare. Too bad. This Sunday's opener is the promise of a masterpiece. And episode six, the harrowing climax of the story, is indeed a masterpiece—a worthy candidate for an Emmy if only there were a category to accommodate it.

If Captain Scott could be a pain in the polar regions, Dr. Edwin Lorrimer is a man to whom you could quite happily take an ice pick—or a mallet. In Death of an Expert Witness, a new Mystery! presentation, the loathsome Lorrimer (Geoffrey Palmer) makes enough enemies in and around his forensic-science lab to provide at least half a dozen good excuses for Performance is the name of the network-movie game this week with a trio of made-for-TV movies given star quality by some very good casting.

It's Peter Ustinov's Hercule Poirot, Faye Dunaway's flighty movie star and talented impersonator (a dual-role performance to befuddle and entertain) and a host of other gifted players that give Agatha Christie's "Thirteen at Dinner" its special appeal. Based (and updated) by Rod Browning on the 1933 novel and directed by Lou Antonio, it provides the Christie-an complexity of plot, variety of setting and mix of characters. Above all, however, there's Ustinov's roly-poly Poirot, the little gray cells ever active as he encounters Dunaway's Lady Edgware, who announces that she'd kill to get her reluctant husband to give her a divorce.

When Lord Edgware is murdered, Poirot saves his old Scotland Yard colleague, Inspector Japp, from falling for the obvious. Two more murders are to come as we and Poirot explore the worlds of haute couture, fox hunting, moviemaking and even croquet. Jonathan Cecil's Hastings, Poirot's docile but perky companion; David Suchet's voracious Japp; and others add to the fun and games, with Ustinov, as always, the master thereof.

Stephanie Zimbalist and Alec Baldwin provide the passion for Love on the Run, its teleplay by Sue Grafton and Steve Humphrey directed by Gus Trikonis. Originally intended as a docudrama based on a real-life case in Tennessee, the film is now a fictitious melodrama about an attorney who falls in love with her convict-client, engineers his escape and flees with him.

Zimbalist's Diana Rockland is a shy, spinsterish lawyer, living with her domineering and complaining invalid father, a former judge; she reluctantly takes the case of the convict, whom she considers a "loser." Baldwin's Sean Carpenter, a lifetime criminal who has served nine years of his 15-year sentence for armed robbery, exudes the animal magnetism that makes both Diana's seduction and her emergence as a woman of action understandable. There is suspense and grit to their story, and Zimbalist paints a fascinating portrait of a woman who throws reason to the wind in her transition from emotional frustration to fulfillment, from passivity to passion. Baldwin is excellent as the man who is the product of a lifetime of losing.

Margot Kidder, in a rare television appearance, is immensely appealing in Picking Up the Pieces, its teleplay by Gordon Cotler directed by Paul Wendkos. The subject is the plight of women seeking separation and divorce in a state that does not have community-property laws. The setting is affluent suburbia, with Kidder the wife of a doctor, the mother of three and a high-school guidance counselor. After 17 years of marriage she can no murder. When he's bumped off in episode two, you know that the challenge to Chief Inspector Adam Daigliesh (Roy Marsden) is going to be deciding who didn't dunit.

With a score or more of characters—or should one say herrings?—to introduce before the deed is done, this week's premiere looks at times like an unfunny parody of Agatha Christie rather than an adaptation of P.D. James. Don't be put off by that. Expert Witness becomes increasingly absorbing as investigations proceed, and the characterizations deepen along with the mystery. Barry Foster, Fiona Walker, Andrew Ray and Cyril Cusack are just a few of the actors who help make this puzzler a real pleasure.

Space prevents us from retailing choice morsels of Laurence Olivier—A Life (Great Performances), a two-part biography that consists largely of interviews given by Olivier in 1982 to British TV personality Melvyn Bragg. Suffice it to say that the doyen of British theater is also one of the great raconteurs of our age. His account of his "sissy" school days, his impersonation of Sam Goldwyn, his recollections of stage fright at the age of 60 shouldn't be missed.

Ex-Fonz Henry Winkler and noted animator Bill Melendez are the minds behind a delightful children's cartoon, "Happily Ever After" (WonderWorks), that deals reassuringly with the painful subject of divorce. For any kids like little Molly Conway who find their world disintegrating around them as their parents go their own separate ways, this tale—narrated by Carol Burnett—may offer just the kind of solace that makes the crisis bearable.

Also venturing into troubled waters this week is a CBS Schoolbreak Special, "The War Between the Classes," a drama about a group of high-school students who receive a persuasive lesson in the roots of racial prejudice.

12 ounces of beer, 5 ounces of wine and 1¼ ounces of liquor all have the same alcohol content.

This message is so important, 24 states put it in their driver's manuals. Yet ABC, CBS and NBC won't put it on TV. Why?

Driving under the influence of alcohol is the single biggest cause of highway accidents...by far.

Still, a lot of otherwise responsible people, who may not know the facts of equivalence, get behind the wheel of a car after "a few beers" or "some wine."

We must dispel the myth

An advertising message was submitted to the networks which simply states the facts of alcohol equivalence and the obvious concerns of at least 24 states who insist these facts be made known to all drivers. Drivers who might otherwise believe that drinking beer or wine isn't really drinking at all. Yet ABC, CBS and NBC have rejected it.

It's time the facts were aired

Last year alone these networks readily accepted over $450 million* from beer and wine companies for TV commercials, yet they refuse to air this important message. A message which describes the facts of equivalence so that no one will inadvertently consume more alcohol than they intend. No matter what they drink.

These facts are so important, we urge you to tell them to everyone whose safety you care about. We're asking you to help out because the networks won't.

AGATHA CHRISTIE'S THIRTEEN AT DINNER

Peter Ustinov and Faye Dunaway

Peter Ustinov returns as Hercule Poirot, Agatha Christie's wily Belgian sleuth, matching wits in this 1985 TV-movie with Faye Dunaway—who's in a dual role as a titled actress and her unruffled impersonator.

The ingenious detective picks and chooses his cases and this one—the murder of Lord Edgware (John Barron)—is certainly one to tax his deductive powers. Lady Edgware, who's better known as American actress Jane Wilkinson, is certainly a prime suspect. After all, she sought Poirot's assistance in getting rid of her husband. Shortly before he was killed, though, Lord Edgware confided to Poirot that he was willing to grant her a divorce.

A thick-headed Scotland Yard inspector (David Suchet) is ready to arrest Lady Edgware. But Poirot cautions that "a good crime is like a fine omelet: it is plain on the outside and you only discover the first clue when you put your fork in." But before Poirot can sink his fork in, the killer strikes again.

Ustinov also played Poirot in "Death on the Nile" and "Evil Under the Sun." Martin: Lee Horsley. Marsh: Bill Nighy. Geraldine: Amanda Pays. Hastings: Jonathan Cecil. David Frost: Himself. (2 hrs.)

longer bear the mental and ultimately physical cruelties of her husband and finally gets him to agree to divorce. She returns from work the next day to find the house stripped of its art works and furnishings, her jewelry gone; the joint bank account has been cleaned out, her credit cards cut off. How she supports herself and her children, who are being manipulated by her rotten husband, how she deals with lawyers and how, in the face of a new romance, she emerges as an independent person make for an absorbing story. David Ackroyd embodies the sum of male-chauvinist piggery as the husband, and James Farentino is pleasing as the new man in her life. The warning is clear: ladies, keep track of your property rights from the minute you say "I do."

A fourth TV-movie, I Dream of Jeannie: 15 Years Later, with Barbara Eden the genie she played in the series for five years, was unavailable for preview.

The one theatrical premiere is of 1983's Daffy Duck's Movie: Fantastic Island, the fourth mélange of the Warner Bros. classic cartoon. The storyline is a takeoff on Fantasy Island, but the delight lies in segments from early '50s cartoons with Bugs Bunny, Porky Pig, Sylvester, Foghorn Leghorn, Yosemite Sam and his sidekick, the Tasmanian Devil.

ON CABLE

Three worthwhile 1984 movies bow this week. Bobby Roth's Heartbreakers offers an incisive look at today's men looking at today's women, with Peter Coyote and Nick Mancuso first-rate as friends whose relationship is tested. Firstborn is an appealing family drama thanks to fine performances by Teri Garr as a single parent, Peter Weller as her new live-in friend and Christopher Collet as her elder son who doesn't buy being bought. And Grandview, U.S.A. is a nice laidback movie about three nice people—Jamie Lee Curtis, Patrick Swayze and C. Thomas Howell—who help each other solve their problems.

In some areas broadcast movies may not be seen on the days indicated. For times of cable movies, see listings and Pay-TV Movie Guide.

THE LAST PLACE ON EARTH

Explorers Richard Falcon Scott and Roald Amundsen shared a dream that only one could realize: being the first to reach the South Pole. Scott's British expedition arrived at the Pole on January 17, 1912, only to find that Amundsen's Norwegian team had been there 34 days earlier. The story of their race against each other and against an even more forbidding opponent—the vast Antarctic wilderness—is told in a six-part drama that opens this series' 15th season.

The first episode chronicles the efforts of Scott (Martin Shaw) and Amundsen (Sverre Anker Ousdal) to raise the capital and crew for their expeditions. In London, Scott is spurred on by his wife Kathleen (Susan Wooldridge), who foresees greatness for him; while in Norway, Amundsen maintains he is going to the North Pole.

Nansen: Max von Sydow. Leon: Per-Theodore Haugen. Johansen: Toralv Maurstad. Cook: Brian Dennehy. Wilson: Stephen Moore. Oates: Richard Morant. Betty: Astrid Follestad. (90 min.)
[What did Scott and Amundsen find when they got to Antarctica? See the Background article on page 40.]

The Thimble Collectors Club

Now, at modest cost, you can build your own collection of choice collector's thimbles.

The Thimble Collectors Club

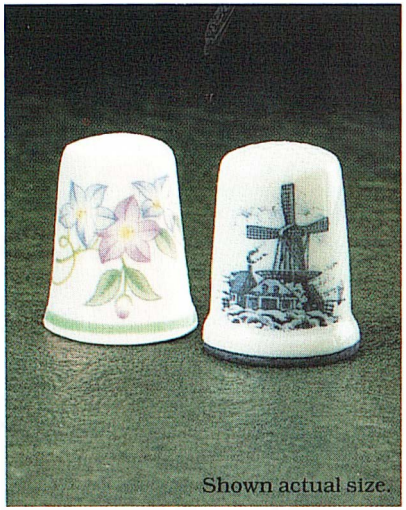
Royal Copenhagen...Wedgwood...Lladro... Ginori...Hutschenreuther...Royal Doulton... Haviland...these and others of the world's greatest porcelain houses will be represented in your collection.



"Royal Garden"; a delightful floral thimble from Royal Worcester. $7.50.

This traditional Dutch Windmill design is delicately captured in the beautiful 'Blue Chinese' style, by Royal Mosa. $8.00.

The finest thimbles are works of art in miniature.

Charming and colorful, they add warmth and appeal to a room. They are family treasures to be passed to daughter and granddaughter. It's no wonder millions of people around the world collect thimbles.

A Lovely Thimble Sent To You Each Month

Now, through membership in the Thimble Collectors Club, you can build a collection of the creme de la creme of porcelain and china thimbles; a collection which would be practically impossible to assemble on your own.

An Aynsley Bird thimble in fine English bone china. $6.80.

Kaiser of Germany has portrayed an exquisitely detailed country scene on this delicate thimble. $6.80.

Each month, you will receive a beautiful thimble. Our representatives are in contact with porcelain houses all around the world. They select only the very best thimbles. Indeed, many of the monthly selections will have been created exclusively for the Club's members.

The thimbles in your collection will bear the names and identifying marks of the great houses that created them. They will reflect the different artistic visions of the various nations and porcelain makers. Thus, the individual thimbles will have infinite variety...yet together they will form a harmonious collection.

A card will accompany each thimble describing the motif on it and the porcelain house which made it.

A Wedgwood thimble in their famous blue Jasper, invented in 1774 by Josiah Wedgwood himself. It depicts their well known Floral Girl. $7.60.

No Risk or Obligation

If you are not delighted with any month's thimble selection, you may simply return it within ten days for full refund. And you may cancel your membership at any time.

Modest Cost

One of the nice things about collecting thimbles is that besides being beautiful, they don't cost a lot. The Club's regular monthly selections typically cost about $7.50 to $9.50.

Send No Money Now

To join the Thimble Collectors Club, just send your application. Enclose no money now. You will be billed for your first monthly thimble selection.

Haviland of Limoges presents a lovely violet thimble – perfectly beautiful! $9.50.

"The Little Mermaid"; from Bing & Grøndahl, made with their distinctive blue underglaze. $9.50.

WORLD WAR II WITH WALTER CRONKITE

Narrated by Walter Cronkite

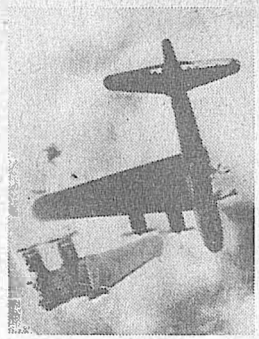
World War II. You've seen the Hollywood version a hundred times over. Now prepare for the real thing. In "Air War Over Europe," your introduction to the landmark series, WORLD WAR II WITH WALTER CRONKITE, you'll join Allied flyers on some of their roughest bombing missions.

Through graphic combat footage taken by both sides, you'll follow them all the way from briefing room to target. You'll see and hear just what they did, as flak and attacking fighters fill the sky. And each mission is a story in itself.

In Episode I, "Target: Ploesti," the plan called for 177 B-24 bombers to avoid German radar by flying all 1,200 miles to the Ploesti oil refineries at treetop level. But when a navigational error takes them over the headquarters of the German Air Defense Command, a brilliant surprise attack becomes one of the most costly air battles of the war.

In Episode II, "Raid on Schweinfurt," you'll witness the first major American air strike deep inside Germany. Flying far beyond the range of Allied fighter protection, 28 B-17s are shot down before even reaching the target, in a battle that tests the limits of human endurance.

In Episode III, "Counterblast: Hamburg," you'll board a U-boat on the attack and see firsthand why U-boat manufacturing plants were priority targets. In just one raid, the RAF put up 800 bombers. How they managed to jam German radar, get the Luftwaffe to defend the wrong city and hit the target with such deadly accuracy is one of the war's great success stories.



And in Episode IV, "Guided Missile," you'll see Hitler's V-1 and V-2 rockets in development at his secret Peenemunde research base, and unleashed at hidden launching sites...go on the spectacular RAF nighttime raid that leveled Peenemunde...view the onslaught as Spitfires chase V-1s while supersonic V-2s rain down on London. And rare footage reveals the long-range V-9 being test-launched. Its proposed target: the United States!

In all, "Air War Over Europe" adds up to 90 minutes of excitement no movie can match. And it's yours for just $4.95, a full $45 off its regular price, with your subscription to the series.

As a subscriber, you'll receive future videocassettes, one every other month, always for 10-day free examination. Each shows you a new and exciting side of the war, in episodes like "Suicide Run To Murmansk," "The Doolittle Raid" and "The Plots Against Hitler." Each videocassette is $49.95 plus shipping and handling. There is no minimum number to buy and you can cancel your subscription at any time.

So if you enjoy this kind of danger-filled high adventure, mail the coupon today. Or for faster service, use your credit card to order and call toll-free 1-800-457-0866 (in Indiana call 1-800-742-1200).

VITAL STATISTICS

Reduced prices of selected movie titles on cassette are not turning renters into buyers. A recent A.C. Nielsen Co. VCR survey shows that 45.1% of VCR owners are "very unlikely" to purchase a recorded movie, even at a suggested list price of $30; 53.1% prefer to rent or borrow and only 21% said they had purchased a recorded cassette within the last year.

Penn Jillette (right) and Teller

A half hour of magic, mayhem and mirth from "a couple of very eccentric guys."

That's Penn Jillette talking (Teller doesn't talk at all—at least not on-camera). The two have been working their magic on a New York stage in recent months, but for this outing they're at the studio of a PBS station in Los Angeles. So how do they open the show? Penn has a station staffer tie up Teller in a straitjacket. And he wants his partner shown no mercy: "The more you can hurt him," Penn tells his accomplice, "the more pledge dollars you'll get."

Teller escapes; he's an escape artist. He's also "the greatest living sleight-of-hand artist in the world today" and, in that capacity, gives a lesson in how to light a cigarette. Penn, for his part, offers fire-eating tips. And together they "add some class" to "wimpy" card tricks.

But one thing they don't do is cheat. There are no camera tricks on this show, Penn swears—on the grave of his mother.

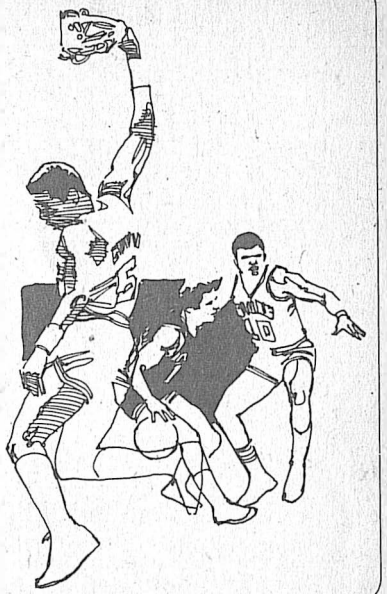
CELTICS AT NETS

NBA BASKETBALL
7:05 PM (TBS)



Return: The Boston Celtics take on the Nets in East Rutherford, N.J., in the first of WTBS's scheduled 55 regular-season games. Rick Barry and Bill Russell call the action. (Live)

The success of the Celtics has started a new quest among NBA hopefuls for massive yet mobile forwards, men who can hit the jumper, drive the lane and still bang underneath with the big boys—someone like Kevin McHale. But while the front line of Larry Bird, Robert Parrish and McHale has been the Celtics' cornerstone, the improved play of guards Dennis Johnson and Danny Ainge has made them the East's pre-eminent team.

The Nets had high hopes of challenging the Celtics last season but a preseason injury to center Darryl Dawkins hampered them from game one. Otis Birdsong, Albert King and Mike O'Koren also missed substantial playing time, and the combined talents of Micheal Ray Richardson and Buck Williams were not enough to keep them in contention.

GREAT PERFORMANCES (CC)
8 PM (22)

Vivien Leigh and Olivier in 1937's "Fire over England." Three years later, they would marry.

LAURENCE OLIVIER—A LIFE, PART 1

A fascinating profile of the man frequently called Britain's greatest living actor.

The basis for this two-part biography is a 1982 interview with Lord Olivier, conducted largely at the actor's home by British TV personality Melvyn Bragg. Olivier's comments on his life are illuminated by the recollections of contemporaries like John Gielgud, Peggy Ashcroft and the late Ralph Richardson. There are also film clips, ranging in Part 1 from 1933's "No Funny Business" (opposite first wife Jill Esmond) and the unsuccessful "Rebecca" screen test of his second wife, Vivien Leigh, to "Henry V," the 1944 vehicle that also marked Olivier's brilliant debut as a film director.

Among his more candid memories in Part 1, which covers the years to 1944, is that of a problematic 1935 stage bout with Shakespeare. "I made a terrible flop as Romeo," he says, "because they said I couldn't speak verse!" He also credits William Wyler, his bullying director in 1939's "Wuthering Heights," with making him into a bona fide movie star, because up until then he was "stupid, conceited, pompous."

Part 1 concludes with the thoughts of such American actors as Jessica Tandy, John Lithgow and Edward Herrmann on how Olivier's work has influenced their own. (90 min.)

Why 'Jeannie' ~~Is Back~~ with an Identity Crisis

Though Barbara Eden was delighted to return in 'I Dream of Jeannie: 15 Years Later,' she wasn't totally pleased with some plans for her character

By Kenneth Turan

Gary Null

"I Dream of Jeannie: 15 Years Later," a TV-movie, will be seen on NBC Sunday, Oct. 20, at 9 P.M. (ET). Check listings for time and channel in your area.

A very large man is walking around Stage 5 of the Burbank Studios wearing a skimpy black tutu, black net stockings and high heels; he looks like his feet are killing him. Equally uncomfortable is the tall, slender woman in a lavender dress whose full beard is exactly the same color as her wheat-straw hair. Sounds pretty kinky, even without the punkish-looking gentlemen in pinkish outfits and rainbow hair who are lounging nearby. Could this curious menagerie, part of a restaurant scene that is scripted to end with all the diners au naturel, could this really be the set for "I Dream of Jeannie: 15 Years Later"?

Certainly the original Jeannie, a hot number from 1965 through 1970, would seem to be ripe for updating. What place could there possibly be in the levelheaded, liberated 1980s for a genie who leaps straight from 2000 years in a bottle to someone's handsome lap, cooing little nothings like "Thou may ask anything of thy slave" and "My → heart sings at having such a handsome master," while performing such marvels of osculation that the man in question, Air Force astronaut Tony Nelson, is reduced to gasping, "Jeannie, we don't do that in America."

Ken Whitmore

Barbara Eden, however, begs to differ with all that. True, she admits, the old I Dream of Jeannie show would never have tolerated a kinky scene like this one, which shows what happens when genies drink too much red wine. But she feels that such departures are not big ones, that they're more like "changing a dress from blue to red. The original show was a very stylish piece, not characteristic of its time. It didn't fit into any groove. We weren't a mommy and daddy and two kids sitcom or an idealized husband and wife; those were the innocent shows. Our show hasn't dated; its subject matter is sort of ageless."

Certainly Eden herself seems ageless; though she has a 20-year-old son and a calendar age of 51, not even a penchant for sweets can keep her from looking blithely youthful. Wearing jeans and a bulky, white sweater in the white, mirrored living room of her canyon home, she turns out to be a lively, somewhat roguish woman who makes no bones about her attachment to Jeannie, the most durable role of her career. "I love her," she fairly roars. "They better not ever try to replace me. I'd picket and throw mud balls. They'd have their hands full."

Equally up in arms, apparently, would be Eden's fans, who have not been exactly shy in expressing their devotion. "Everywhere I go, people call me Jeannie, and they have such a nice expression on their faces when they talk about the show," she says with fond protectiveness. Other stars may have on occasion wished their stalwarts were more mannerly and discreet, but Eden feels the continued attention is "a good payoff, that's the buzzword now, isn't it?" and proffers → no end of stories about her faithful legions. Take the folks in the South of France ("I didn't expect to be recognized out of this country") who came up and did a heavily accented "You Jeannie?" Or the elevator repairman in Chicago who helped when she was stuck in a high-rise and said, "If I'd known it was you, I'd have left you there. Why didn't you get yourself out?" More recently, Eden was at a performance of "Dreamgirls," and heard so much noise behind her she thought a fight had broken out. "'There's no fight,' they told me, 'They're looking at you.' When I turned, the whole audience gave me an ovation. That's the first time that happened," she beams. "I like that."

A point sometimes raised by those not quite so enamored of Jeannie is that the genie in question did not come off as a paragon of emancipated womanhood. Eden, no surprise here, does not agree. Never has, never will. "Journalists are always asking about that, but audiences don't seem to notice," she says. "Jeannie wasn't a wimp or a robot. She really had a mind of her own. People in the women's movement would sometimes say, 'How can you call him master?' My own personal little bit of philosophy is that I don't think what we say is as important as what we do. She was saying 'yes master,' but she was always doing her own thing. Jeannie was certainly an independent woman; she was never a doormat."

Given all of this, it might seem surprising that when she was approached about doing the updated version of the show that became "I Dream of Jeannie: 15 Years Later," Eden didn't leap at the opportunity. For one thing, even though she was pleased about having Wayne Rogers as her co-star, he was not, after all, the original astronaut, Larry Hagman being otherwise employed in the environs of Southfork. "I loved working with Larry," she says, reminiscing about "the whole list of standards and practices" they had to abide by and laughed at. Eden's initial unwillingness was amplified after executive producer Barbara Corday "had a few discussions with me about the idea of liberating Jeannie. I said 'You can't liberate someone who already was.' I didn't see how you could do it again coming from that angle."

The idea that finally united these opposing points of view was "having Jeannie have an identity crisis while trying to be a woman of the '80s. It's brought to her attention that perhaps she should be independent, which she always was. It's like saying to a happy person, 'Oh, you should be happier.' She worries herself right into a hole." Armed with lines like "the men in this family are just going to have to realize that their wishes are no longer my commands," Jeannie ends up having a trial separation from the astronaut. If that sounds not quite like the sprite of yore, we have Eden's assurance that it will all be "faithful to what Jeannie fans like." Scout's honor.

What Jeannie fans have always especially liked is the semi-diaphanous harem costume that, to quote a line from the pilot, is "just not Air Force." Putting it on after 15 years "was a very strange feeling, it really was. I got goose bumps. I looked in the mirror and I felt that time hadn't passed, like 'Whoa, The Twilight Zone'," she says, humming the old TZ melody. Back in those early shows, the fact that Jeannie's navel was terra incognita was big stuff. "No one specifically said it couldn't be shown, but in those days it was something you didn't do," Eden remembers. "The people at Laugh-In wanted to premiere my navel, but they couldn't get NBC to agree. I remember a meeting with all these men in dark suits discussing whether Jeannie's navel should be shown or not." The new Jeannie, of course, will operate under no such strictures. "Yes, my navel will debut. I'm not sure it should, but it will," courtesy of an updated, very 1980s genie costume. "It's just gauze and a few beads. It's a lot sexier than a robe and slippers," Barbara Eden says, admitting that, yes, "they never would have had a genie costume like that" in ye olde days. "It's not very practical," she says, sighing. "I won't go out and wax the car in that one." (END)

It's 'the coldest, most dangerous and most beautiful continent'

A writer reports on what it's like to live and work in Antarctica

By Charles Neider

On Sunday, Oct. 20, at 9 P.M. (ET), PBS's Masterpiece Theatre begins The Last Place on Earth, a six-part series dramatizing the race to the South Pole between British explorer Robert F. Scott (Martin Shaw) and the Norwegian Roald Amundsen (Sverre Anker Ousdal). See local listings for time and channel in your area. Here, noted Mark Twain scholar, author and three-time Antarctic visitor Charles Neider furnishes his impressions of this "last place on earth."

Antarctic memories. The sun that never sets in summer, circling counterclockwise like a demon, round and round, capable of searing you at 3 A.M. as it bounces off the ice. The Adélie penguins caught in a blizzard, heads in plumage, letting themselves be snow covered, too Antarctic-smart to try to buck it. The heavenly dry sky, so deeply azure, yet containing tints of lemon, lime at the zenith.

Fear? You bet: sometimes right in my marrow. I wouldn't want to be caught dead camping out or trekking with somebody who's not afraid of the place, for that person might show poor judgment in a pinch and cost me my limbs if not my life. Mostly, though, you seem to wear a Chinese mask of stoicism while in the Antarctic. And on the whole you feel cozily secure. If you didn't, you couldn't function, much less enjoy the place.

Dangerous? In some ways not as dangerous as a great city, a city of meaningless rapes and killings. Aside from sudden changes in weather, the worst enemies in Antarctica are ignorance, stupidity, vain pride. Beware of extrapolating the rules of the temperate region to Antarctica; Antarctica has laws of its own. No land mammals, no reptiles, practically no insects, no noxious plants to bother you. It's often said that Antarctica is a hostile place. I disagree. It's magnificently neutral. Tough? Yes. But the living ecosystems are remarkably fragile. Trample on a bit of lichen, and it may take a long, long time for it to recover in a place of such thin life margins.

And of such beauty. It's by far the most beautiful place I've ever seen. The word "noble" comes to mind when you're viewing it. Awe, humility and a euphoria that recalls the feelings of immortality of childhood: these are other important emotions there.

"How is it up there?" I'm sometimes asked. Well, it isn't up there, it's down there. Up, down: from outer space it's all relative. "How are the polar bears?" There are no polar bears and no indigenous land animals (except a tiny mite and a wingless fly) as there are in the Arctic. There's an almost total absence of indigenous life. Antarctica was a part of the southern supercontinent, Gondwanaland, some 60 to 70 million years ago and, for the last 40 million years, has been the most remote large landmass on our planet. It's the only great landmass that never harbored a native human population.

A contrast. The North Pole is situated on a sea surrounded by great landmasses: North America, Asia, Greenland. The South Pole (altitude: 9300 feet) sits atop a high inland plateau of ice at the center of a continent surrounded by the Southern Ocean—the confluence of the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans—with characteristics of its own.

The coldest, windiest, driest, highest, most dangerous and most beautiful continent. Beautiful? White ice? (Locked up in the Antarctic are some 90 per cent of the world's ice and two-thirds of the world's fresh water.) But the ice isn't just white, it's full of pastel subtleties: rose, pink, prune, pale green—and then suddenly electric, cobalt blue. And the textures are infinite: ripples, waves, soft ice, crevasses, hummocks, a variety of snow covers. Exotic? It's the only continent on earth that pulses, expanding in the austral winter, shrinking in the austral summer (September-March). In winter the ocean freezes for hundreds of miles around the continent's perimeter, almost doubling Antarctica's size. And there are vast mountain ranges and strange, windy, cold, dry valleys that deglaciated long ago.

We're talking about a continent that's larger than the U.S. and Mexico combined; that occupies more than 25 per cent of the landmass south of the equator; one of whose ice shelves (the Ross Ice Shelf) is up to 1400 feet thick and about the size of France. Solitude? About 3000 temporary inhabitants during the height of the working (summer) season. You feel graced to be able to take a deep breath so far from the rest of the gang teeming the planet.

How do you get to Antarctica? Aside from a few expensive tourist tours that briefly and mostly touch the northern extremities of the Antarctic Peninsula region south of South America, you don't, unless your government sends you there. In our own case, the National Science Foundation is the Antarctic's doorkeeper. I'm not a scientist. I went as a writer and a humanist to sense what it's like to live and work there, and to glimpse how the Antarctic affects our minds, sensés, emotions, and mysteriously expands and regenerates us. All three times I flew to Christchurch, New Zealand, where I got suited up, then proceeded by Navy HC-130 to an ice airfield near McMurdo Station on Ross Island, Antarctica.

What do people do in Antarctica? The scientists work in labs or in the field. The logistics personnel help them prepare for camping, set up field camps for them, transport them. Recreation? You read, listen to music, hang out at the bars. The physical-fitness craze that has swept the U.S. in recent years has reached Ant- → arctica, significantly reducing the bar population. For more extreme tastes there's the Vanda Swim Club, involving breaking through the ice crust of Lake Vanda in one of the Dry Valleys and taking a dip in the nude. And there's the 300 Club for those who, when the temperature is -100° Fahrenheit or lower, race outside from a sauna for a run around the Pole. The club's name refers to the temperature difference of 300°.

Cold? Carbon dioxide, a gas, becomes dry ice at about -77° Fahrenheit. Vostok Station, a small Soviet base on the great plateau, is the world's coldest recorded place. Recently it experienced a temperature of -128.6° Fahrenheit.

People ask, "How do you stand the cold?" You're tempted to reply, "Heroically." Actually, you dress for it. Still, I've been miserably cold on several occasions. The worst was in a near-fatal helicopter crash close to the summit of the southernmost active volcano, the huge, white Mt. Erebus, higher than Fuji or Vesuvius, and with one of the world's three fire lakes in its crater.

The four of us survived, at -31° Fahrenheit, in an Air Force survival tent (designed for two persons) at an altitude of 12,200 feet for some 10 hours before we were spotted by a helicopter and then rescued. And my three companions had forgotten to bring their own survival gear. Vain pride? Taking the continent for granted? Putting too much faith in the helicopter's high technology? Still, we were found, and without irreversible damage. Was it luck, or a miracle?

Man is fragile in that place. But, as I have said, the place is fragile, too. When the pressure mounts and mounts to exploit for mineral and gas and oil reserves, will this, the last great common on earth, survive? Its great beauty, its suggestion of being marvelously extraterrestrial, its awesomeness, its pristine nobility—will these remain? For the sake of our posterity, for the sake of our planet, let us hope they do. (END)

Can a Love Boater Get Elected?

Man Overboard... and Running for Congress

Ted Michener

Here is a political humorist's advice as Fred Grandy (Gopher) considers launching his campaign

By Mark Russell

The United States Congress, in addition to being a rest home for lawyers, also has been a haven over the years for doctors, morticians and bricklayers, as well as a couple of basketball players and an astronaut. Now comes word that among → those considering running for a seat in the House of Representatives next year is Fred Grandy, the actor who plays the part of Burl "Gopher" Smith, the purser on The Love Boat, a television show equal in popularity to apple pie and breathing, thanks to its millions of living-room cruise-coveting fans.

And why not? The idea of an actor in politics long ago lost its novelty, and, as I see it, you can never have enough "go-fers" in Congress.

Mr. Grandy, I am told, in addition to being The Love Boat's impish and whimsical purser, is also a Harvard graduate and a former prep-school roommate of David Eisenhower's. As they say in baseball, Whether Fred "Gopher" Grandy remains on The Love Boat or goes to Congress, in either case he will be escaping from reality.

0 for 3, but these qualifications need not hinder Fred Grandy from running a spirited campaign as he attempts the Big Career Move from purser on The Love Boat's sound stage to freshman water boy on the poop deck of the Ship of State. People with less experience in politics have gone on to great success catering to their constituents' every need—whether fetching a sewer contract, hand-delivering a Government appointment, or organizing the players in a game of legislative shuffleboard.

It can also be said that whether Fred "Gopher" Grandy remains on The Love Boat or goes to Congress, in either case he will be escaping from reality. After all, what is Congress but several parties on a cruise in pursuit of happiness—especially every election year? Another similarity is that Grandy's background on a pleasure ship has already prepared him in the art of the political junket.

If I could presume to offer him some advice on his campaign, I would tell Grandy to flaunt his Love Boat experience with pride. Whoever his opponent, he or she would no doubt give anything for such instant identity.

Since issues seldom matter to many a TV-weaned voter, all Mr. Grandy has to do is put on his white purser's uniform and do a political commercial waving from the deck of the Love Boat as the voice-over announcer says: "Get on board with Gopher as he cruises up the Potomac. Paid for by Gopher for Congress Committee, Aaron Spelling, Treasurer."

I would also suggest that Grandy might emphasize his expertise in foreign affairs (no, silly, not the ones conducted in the staterooms)---after all, he has a firsthand knowledge of many of the trouble spots of the world: Acapulco, Waikiki, Paradise Island and Tahiti. In fact, if elected, Representative Grandy could introduce a bill to increase our balance of payments with Pago Pago. His first speech in the House could be a ringing denunciation of the illegal dumping of foreign-made coconut-oil tanning lotion.

All politicians love to tell of their combat experiences, bogus and otherwise, and Grandy could be no exception. I see him enthralling the voters with sea stories, perhaps telling of the crisis in which Ted Lange, who plays The Love Boat's bartender, ran out of little paper umbrellas for the daiquiris—"And, we were still three days out of Puerto Vallarta. That was a hairy one, I'll tell you.

"Then, there was the time the cue cards got wet going around Diamond Head and we had to ad-lib all the way to Maui. They gave me the Love Boat Medal of Honor with two peanut clusters for that one."

Of course, there is more to a person than his screen portrayals show (stand by amidships for a Big Disclaimer off the starboard bow). Certainly, Fred Grandy has every right to run for the office of his choice. This is America. I wish him luck—and if he would rather forsake the whopping salary and network exposure amidst bikini-clad actresses for C-SPAN and Tip O'Neill, that's his business. Today, the Gipper---tomorrow, the Gopher. (END)

Satirist Mark Russell's next one-man show is scheduled to air on Friday, Nov. 1, from 10:30-11 P.M. (ET) on most PBS stations. Consult local listings for time and channel in your area.

MR. BELVEDERE

Ever since Titus Maccius Plautus first set stylus to tablet (and maybe before that, too, since Roman playwrights had no qualms at all about ripping off their Greek predecessors), writers have found comedy in the way servants manipulate their masters. Usually the servant was bright, the master either pompous, stupid, or both. In many cases, the servant was unmistakably the actual head of the family, as was the case in Hazel and Soap.

This season we have three smart servant–inept master shows—Who's the Boss?, Gimme a Break and Mr. Belvedere. The newest, ABC's Mr. Belvedere, has an English housekeeper in the tradition of an English butler, P.G. Wodehouse's Jeeves, but actually based on the character played in three motion pictures by the late Clifton Webb.

Thus the only thing really new about the Mr. Belvedere character is the man who's playing it on television, Christopher Hewett. Hewett is a veteran of stage and screen roles in England and the United States and has directed some 100 stage productions. It should also be noted, although for the life of me I can't think why, that he replaced Herve Villechaize as Mr. Roarke's trusted assistant during Fantasy Island's last season on the air.

As Mr. Belvedere, this respected actor and director is called upon to lift his right eyebrow, roll his eyes and do slow takes as he helps the Owens family—father George (Bob Uecker), mother Marsha (Ilene Graff), 16-year-old Kevin (Rob Stone), 14-year-old Heather (Tracy Wells) and 8-year-old Wesley (Brice Beckham)—get out of scrapes only the dedicated bubbleheads one finds in sitcoms could possibly get into.

Uecker has appeared on a number of talk shows and is a radio announcer for the Milwaukee Brewers. Before that he played baseball for the Milwaukee Braves, St. Louis Cardinals, Philadelphia Phillies and Atlanta Braves. He played catcher and had a lifetime batting average (before Mr. Belvedere) of .200. His acting experience was gained on several Miller Lite commercials where the much-traded Uecker was called upon to do a lot more serious acting than he is on Mr. Belvedere.

In one of the three episodes we were condemned to watch, Kevin Owens became enamored of a girl who demanded commitment to a campaign against killing animals for their fur before she would grant him certain unnamed favors. His commitment took the form of visiting a furrier and spraying red paint on a costly mink coat. In another, the senior Owenses left for a Florida vacation and all three kids got into trouble. Sample: Young Wesley hears Mr. Belvedere say that he has a headache aspirin won't cure—what he really needs is an oriental massage. So Wesley phones a massage parlor that offers house calls, the tootsie arrives and all sorts of single entendre ensue.

Come to think of it, there's a bit too much sexual innuendo in this show for its early Friday evening time slot. On the other hand the producers have refrained from giving the Owenses a lovable dog. And the show, confined to minimal indoor sets in the episodes we saw, is supposed to have Pittsburgh as its locale. Pittsburgh. That may be a first. (END)
